4. How does personal branding differ from self-promotion, and why is this distinction important?

Answer: Rewritten:

Differentiating between personal branding and self-promotion is essential as it shapes how individuals are perceived by others. Personal branding involves the continuous and genuine development of one's identity, emphasizing values and uniqueness, with the goal of building a positive and long-lasting reputation. Conversely, self-promotion is more strategic and aims to highlight specific achievements for short-term gains. Achieving a balance between the two approaches is crucial in order to foster an authentic and sustainable image in both personal and professional contexts.

By understanding this distinction, individuals can create a lasting impression through personal branding, while also strategically promoting themselves to achieve short-term goals. Thus, striking a balance between personal branding and self-promotion ensures that others perceive individuals in an authentic and positive

5. What are you most proud of?

Answer: During my studies, I had the opportunity to develop an impressive website that is both responsive and user-friendly. This project allowed me to showcase my expertise in Javascripts, ReactJs, NodeJs, ExpressJs, and MongoDB, resulting in enhanced site performance and positive user feedback. This experience truly solidified my love for web development. Not only did this project hone my coding abilities, but it also highlighted my problem-solving skills and dedication to providing a seamless user experience. I take pride in the fact that this project reflects my commitment to keeping up with industry best practices and my eagerness to push the boundaries of creativity in web development.
